3. READING

H. Read the text below and answer the questions 1-5. Choose a, b, c or d.

The area now known as the United States of America was not an unpopulated wilderness before the arrival of European settlers. Among those who were already living off the land were the Cheyenne, one of several tribes of Native Americans. Like other tribes, such as the Sioux and the Navajo, they were put under a lot of pressure to change both where and how they lived.

Four hundred years ago the Cheyenne, whose name means 'little red-talker', were based in the Eastern Woodlands. Unusually for Native American tribes, they were farmers, planting corn and beans rather than hunters. However, by the middle of the nineteenth century this had changed, and the Cheyenne had developed a horse culture and hunted bison on the Great Plains.

Traditionally, the chiefs or elders of the Cheyenne were organised into the 'Council of Forty-Four.' They had rules for everyday life, warfare, celebrations and ceremonies. One thing that made the Cheyenne different from other tribes, which were exclusively patriarchal, was that women were far more active in tribal affairs.

In twenty-first century America, many Cheyenne live in exactly the same way as do most people in big cities. However, there is another option for those who want to keep their traditional way of life. This is to live on the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation in southeast Montana, or on the Southern Cheyenne Reservation in central Oklahoma. The combined population of the Cheyenne is presently near to 20,000.

- When did the Cheyenne migrate to the Great Plains?
 - around 1850
 - more than four hundred years ago
 - as soon as the Europeans arrived in America
 - in this century
- What does the word they refer to in line 6?
 - the Sioux and the Navajo
 - the Cheyenne
 - several Native American tribes
 - the European settlers
- Where would a Cheyenne who wanted a traditional way of life prefer to live?
 - on a reservation
 - in a big city
 - anywhere in Montana
 - on the Great Plains
- Which of the following is not true?
 - Europeans were not the first people to live in the US.
 - Today some Cheyenne live on reservations.
 - The Cheyenne have always lived in the same place.
 - Women in Cheyenne communities had a higher status than in other tribes.
- What is the purpose of the text?
 - to give a personal account of changes in a lifestyle
 - to protest against the treatment of Native Americans
 - to give some general information about a Native American tribe
 - to explain why the Cheyenne population is very low

The Lost World

line 2 ▶

Somewhere deep in the rainforests of South America lies a mysterious place that time has forgotten – and this is where our expedition was heading. For two days we travelled up a large river, dark in colour, yet transparent, so that one could see the bottom. On either side of the river was thick jungle; the trees were incredibly tall and thick and they seemed to shoot upwards in magnificent columns forming a green roof far above our heads.

Occasionally, if I looked up, I saw a ray of sunshine through the green branches. As we walked noiselessly through the thick soft carpet of vegetation, a silence fell upon us and even Professor Challenger's loud voice sank into a whisper. We passed amazing plantlife: vivid orchids and clusters of flowers curled around ancient tree trunks – it was like a fairyland. There was no sign of animal life on the ground, but a constant movement above our heads told us that there existed another world inhabited by monkeys, birds and snakes. At dawn and sunset the monkeys screamed and the parakeets screeched, but during the long slow hours of the day, the buzz of insects, like the crashing of waves, filled our ears.

On our third day, we heard something that terrified us. A deep rhythmic beating in the air. Our Indian companions froze with terror; it was as if they had been turned into bronze statues.

'What is it?' I asked.

'War drums,' replied Challenger.

'Yes, sir, war drums,' said our guide Gomez. 'Wild Indians. They are watching us. They will kill us if they can.'

The drums continued beating throughout the day. Sometimes they beat quickly, sometimes slowly, at one point, one far to the east let out a high, fast beat, which was quickly followed by a deep roll coming from the north. They were communicating with each other through the drum beats. There was something terribly threatening about those sounds; they seemed to form an endless repetition of Gomez's words, 'We will kill you if we can. We will kill you if we can.'

All day we heard the beating of the drums. I learnt that day that despite their constant quarrelling, both Professor Challenger and Professor Summerlee were extremely brave men. While the other members of the group, myself included, shivered with fear, those two men observed and commented happily on the wealth of wildlife that existed in that place.

That night we made camp and prepared ourselves for an attack. Nothing came, and as the dawn approached we moved on, leaving the frightening drumbeat behind us. We carried on up the river until we arrived at a shallow stream with a sandy bottom. On either side of it, there was thick luxuriant vegetation. The vegetation overhead formed a natural arch and through this golden tunnel flowed the green river. The river was beautifully coloured by the vivid sunlight from above filtering through the green archway. For three days we travelled through this tunnel of green sunshine until the stream became too shallow and we had to continue on foot. We walked up and up a rocky slope until an open plain came into view.

That night we caught a small pig-like animal, half of which was given to the Indians, while our share was slowly roasted over a fire. It was a moonless night with a few stars. We huddled close to the warmth of the fire; our mouths were watering at the thought of our meal when suddenly out of the darkness something flew into our camp. I felt leathery wings touch my skin and caught a glimpse of red, greedy eyes, a long snakelike neck and razor-sharp teeth. Then, with a flap of wings the monster was gone and so was our dinner.

Zadie Smith is a successful British novelist who caused a sensation in the publishing world at the age of 21 when the first 80 pages of her first novel were sold to a publisher. She was born on October 25, 1975 in a working class area of London. Her mother grew up in Jamaica and emigrated to England, where she met and later married an Englishman. Zadie was originally named Sadie but when she was fourteen, she changed her name to Zadie because it sounded more exotic.

Zadie attended state primary and secondary schools and she later went on to get a degree in English Literature from the University of Cambridge. While she was in her final year of university, she completed her first novel, White Teeth. The novel was an instant success and won several literary prizes, including the Whitbread First Novel Award. It's a coming-of-age story about three ethnically diverse families set in multicultural London. The novel tackles subjects such as history, multiculturalism and war. White Teeth has been translated into over twenty languages and the novel was adapted into a television drama.

Her most recent book On Beauty won the prestigious Orange Prize for Fiction. Zadie Smith continues to write essays and short stories for magazines. Her writing has provided people with a valuable insight into contemporary topics, in particular, multicultural families. Despite her young age and modest background, Zadie Smith has become one of the leading novelists of her generation.

Going Solar !

Solar energy

Solar technology is one of the many ways in which you can reduce your ecological footprint and cut costs on your utility bills at the same time. Currently, many companies, factories and even homes are powered by photovoltaic installations. Photovoltaics (PV) is a form of solar technology that produces electricity from sunlight without the use of batteries or other electrical devices. Photovoltaic panels or cells that are attached to the roof of a building collect the sunlight and turn it into electricity. These panels are fitted onto a roof individually, but the warmth of the sun helps to secure the panels to the roof making it weather-resistant. PV is rapidly gaining in popularity and is probably the fastest growing source of alternative energy.

Where to see practical applications of PV

Go see the Oakland University public demonstration project at 4000 Meadowbrook Drive. The university installed a photovoltaic roof on one of their student apartment buildings. The roof is split into four parts in order to face north, south, east and west to maximise exposure to sunlight. It collects light from the sun and turns it into energy and is also aesthetically pleasing to look at. The power that is not used by the photovoltaic apartment building is then fed to other buildings on the campus. In this way, just one building with the photovoltaic system is able to power several other buildings that have not installed this type of technology. On the other hand, on cloudy days when the sunlight is not adequate to power the building, the photovoltaic building is able to feed off the power from other buildings that it is 'connected' to. There is no electricity bill and never a shortage of hot water!

Find out more at www.oakland.edu/energy/solar.htm

Or come and visit the Alternative Energy Commission (AEC) demonstration solar home. See a home that is powered solely by solar energy and get information about solutions that will suit your own needs.

12 Bellevue Ave.

Open Mon, Tues, Thurs, Fri 9:00am - 4:00pm,

Wed 1:00pm - 8:00pm

Weekends 10:00am – 5:00pm

How PV benefits you and the environment!

Using photovoltaics is good for the environment because this kind of energy doesn't create any pollution. Without any effort, the use of this system, as opposed to other forms of energy, helps the environment. The cost of buying and installing a photovoltaic system depends on the size of the house and the amount of available sunlight, and while the initial cost may seem high, in the long run it will pay for itself by eliminating electricity bills. In addition, photovoltaic systems have low maintenance costs.

I. Read an article about Philately. Some sentences have been removed from the text. Choose from the sentences A-G the one which best fits each gap. There is one extra sentence which you do not need to use.

Philately

Since ancient times, people have been leaving their places of birth and travelling in order to explore far away places.

(1) ____ This was when the idea of the first postal service came into being.

Up until the time of Alexander the Great, no one had organised any special way of doing this. Alexander, who had left his lands in the care of his mother, organised a system of couriers to ensure that he received messages from home every day, therefore keeping track of what was going on in his kingdom.

A number of centuries later, the Romans organised an even more efficient network of couriers throughout their Empire. (2) ____ This kept the Senate informed of the progress of their army.

Many other courier services were established in the years that followed. However, the one we are familiar with today first came into being in Britain on the 1st May, 1840. That was when the first adhesive postage stamp was issued. (3) ____ The illustration on this stamp was of Queen Victoria, who was ruling at the time. This tradition of portraying royalty on stamps has continued in Britain up until the present time.

Later, a second stamp was issued. (4) ____ By 1843, Brazil and the Swiss canton of Zurich had also issued their first stamps. The United States followed in 1847 and by 1860 the majority of the countries in the world had issued their own stamps.

These first stamps were not just bought for postal purposes. Some people bought them as souvenirs or because they liked the way they looked. (5) ____ What also became popular round this time was issuing stamps to honour important events. In fact, nowadays, almost every country issues such stamps just for the money to be made from philatelists.

These days, philately as well as being a hobby is big business. The buying and selling of stamps for other than their postal use is widespread. The majority of these stamps do not change hands at their face value either. The rarer the stamp, the more expensive it is. For example, in 1856 a set of stamps was issued in British Guyana. At the present time there is only one of these stamps still in existence. At an auction in New York in 1880, it was sold for almost a million dollars.

This stamp would be the ultimate possession for any philatelist.

(6) ____ There, they can get information and catalogues which keep them up-to-date about new developments.

- A. It was called the Penny Black and enabled anybody to send a letter anywhere in the country for only a penny.
- B. Many of them, and especially those who were part of conquering armies, wanted to maintain some kind of contact with their homeland.
- C. However, most are just happy to develop their collections and join one of the clubs or societies that exist.
- D. This was called the Tuppenny Blue and also featured a picture of Queen Victoria.
- E. These people can probably be regarded as the first philatelists.
- F. They connected such faraway places as Spain in the west to towns on the banks of the Danube in the east.

H. Six sentences have been removed from the text below. Choose from the sentences A-G the one which best fits each gap (1-6). There is one extra sentence which you do not need to use.

- A. In 2002, however, only 53 shark attacks were reported worldwide and of those only 3 were fatal.
- B. On the other hand, it's worth mentioning that man kills up to 73 million sharks a year.
- C. For people who are not so faint-headed there is also the opportunity to go scuba diving amongst the sharks with very experienced guides.
- D. Unlike whales and dolphins, sharks are not mammals.
- E. But, that is exactly what an estimated quarter of a million people do every year.
- F. This in turn would affect the whole of marine ecology as we know it.
- G. Today's equivalent, the Great White Shark, is approximately seven metres long.

SHARKS

Sharks are one of the most feared creatures on this planet. The idea of diving into any part of the sea occupied by sharks is enough to make people's skin crawl. 1 Shark diving has become one of the latest adventure sports and is gaining in popularity in leaps and bounds.

Did you know that there are at least 465 species of shark? They range from the great whale and basking shark to the pygmy shark, which is the smallest of the species. Today's sharks have not changed that much since their forefathers the Carcharodon Carcharias, which inhabited the earth more than forty million years ago. 2 These impressive measurements are of course one of the reasons people really want to get a good look at them, despite what they believe will take them into danger.

In actual fact, most people know very little about sharks, apart from the fact that they kill things and that they can kill us. 3 If you think this is a high number, perhaps you should consider that in the same period 17,000 people died in car accidents and as many as 350 people drowned in the bath. Someone drowning while they have a bath is not an everyday kind of happening, but it seems to be much more common than a fatal shark attack. 4

Sharks are very important to the environment. Without them there would be a population explosion of certain forms of marine life which would cause the destruction of others. 5 Therefore, it is important that people become better educated about sharks and understand that they deserve as much respect as any other creature that exists on this planet.

Fortunately, things have been changing in recent years and the world is slowly learning that sharks are not just mindless killers but are intelligent, fascinating and beautiful. We now live in the age of ecotourism and we are lucky that there are shark lovers who want to show people who are interested what sharks are really like. In several parts of the world, you can view sharks from specially constructed cages which are lowered into the water. 6

Slowly but surely, the shark's image is improving and laws are being made to protect those that are endangered.

3. READING

H. Read the text and answer the questions 1-6. Choose a, b, c or d.

In 2006 the organisers of the yearly Madrid Fashion Week banned all models with a body mass index of less than 18. This happened after a Uruguayan model died because of complications owing to extreme weight loss caused by the eating disorder anorexia.

This brought many young women's and even young men's obsession with being thin very much back into the public eye. What is body mass index, or BMI as it is known for short? Well, one's BMI is worked out by dividing your weight in kilograms by your height in metres squared. Anyone can work out their BMI using a simple calculator: $BMI = \frac{\text{Kilograms}}{(\text{metres})^2}$. The result you get is then classified into the following groups.

However, a BMI measurement is not as accurate if you are an athlete or a very muscular person, as muscle is heavier than fat and can put one in a higher BMI.

Obesity, however, was not the concern of the Spanish authorities. They asked fashion store owners, some of which are international names, to fatten up their window dummies to a size 10 or more. This is one of a series of actions taken to put pressure on the fashion industry to put an overall ban on the so-called size zero catwalk models. This seems to be essential as there is no doubt that these models have a great influence on young people.

Most UK shop window dummies are a size 10 with a 34 inch chest, 24 inch waist and 34 inch hips and are 5 ft 10 inches tall, while an average woman in the UK is a size 16 and is only 5 ft 4 inches tall. Health experts are demanding that High Street shops stop using unrealistically thin mannequins in their shop windows.

Stick thin has been a problem for many years now. Even in the sixties, Twiggy, the super-thin top model, was a huge star, and it looks like young women are going to be starving themselves in the foreseeable future unless action is taken.

Recommended BMI chart:

Underweight	BMI less than 18.5
Ideal	BMI 18.5 - 25
Overweight	BMI 25 - 30
Obese – should lose weight	BMI 30 - 40
Very obese – lose weight now	BMI greater than 40

- What is the main message of the text?
 - Thin is beautiful.
 - Too thin is not recommended.
 - Heavier is healthier.
 - Thin means healthy.
- What made the Spanish authorities ban certain models from the catwalk?
 - a doctor's recommendation
 - insurance complications
 - the models' eating disorders
 - the death of a model
- What should someone with a BMI of 32 do?
 - go on a diet
 - try to gain weight
 - stop worrying about his/her weight
 - see a doctor immediately
- Why could an athlete's BMI be inaccurate?
 - Because an athlete's weight goes up and down.
 - Athletes don't have any body fat.
 - Athletes are usually very tall.
 - Muscle weighs more than fat does.
- What were fashion stores asked to do by the Spanish authorities?
 - make their models bigger
 - put pressure on their models
 - not use size zero dummies in their windows
 - use their influence on young people
- How are shop window dummies different from the average woman in the UK?
 - They're shorter and slimmer.
 - They're taller and slimmer.
 - They're much bigger.
 - There isn't much difference.

The Great Barrier Reef

Reefs form under water and can be made of coral, sand or rock. The top of the reef sits about two or three feet below sea level. Coral reefs are found in warm, shallow, clean water and the Great Barrier is the largest coral reef of all. It stretches for two thousand kilometres and forms a natural breakwater that protects the coast of Australia from the strong waves of the South Pacific. There are many islands on the Great Barrier Reef formed by piled up coral and sand. They are, however, very difficult to reach as sharp coral will tear the bottom out of a boat. One must be careful not to step on living coral as it grows very slowly, about five centimetres a year. The Great Barrier is home to many types of fish which depend on coral to protect them.

B

Victoria Falls

One of the greatest waterfalls in the world is on the Zambezi River on the border between Zambia and Zimbabwe. Some people believe that it is the most beautiful sight they have ever seen. Local inhabitants call it 'mosi-oa-tunya' which means 'smoke that thunders'. This is probably because you can hear the falls and see the mist that rises from them long before you can see the falls themselves. The falls are more than a mile wide and go from 256 feet at the side to 354 feet high in the centre. At the top they are separated into several parts by small islands and cliffs. Discovered in 1855 by the Scottish explorer, David Livingston, the falls were named in honour of Queen Victoria.

C

The Grand Canyon

The Grand Canyon, situated in Arizona, USA, is known for its spectacular shapes and colours and was cut by the Colorado River which flows through it. The Grand Canyon is characterised by contrasting weather conditions. In the middle, it is extremely hot and dry. On the north rim, it is much more mountain-like and cooler, particularly at night, whereas on the south rim, there is a combination of hot and cooler temperatures. Hiking in the Canyon is popular but very different from hiking in other regions because of the dry climate. It is strongly recommended that hikers in the Canyon should consume a minimum of three litres of water a day. Moreover, they should not leave any of their skin exposed or hike in the full heat of midday.

D

Ayers Rock

Ayers Rock is one of the oldest rocks on Earth. It is located in Australia and is known as Uluru by the native Aborigines. They also believe that it is a symbol of creation. Uluru was formed over a period of 500 million years. It now stands 1142 feet above the plain and is an amazing five miles round the base. The rock is in the Uluru National Park which is home to 150 species of bird and 26 types of mammal. The sides of Uluru have many caves, which the Aborigines also believe are of spiritual significance. The whole area of Ayers Rock is quite spectacular and well worth a visit.

The Barringer Meteor Crater

Some of the natural wonders of the world are known for their beauty but not the Barringer Meteor Crater. It is, however, an amazing physical phenomenon that was created by a meteor smashing into the earth at 43,125 miles per hour thousands of years ago. The crater is 4,145 feet across and 570 feet deep. When it was first discovered in 1871, they thought that it was the top of a volcano. However, in 1902, Dr Daniel Barringer proved that the rocks around the hole were not volcanic, and over a period of time, it was proved they had come from an enormous rock that had crashed into the earth. The nearest population centres to it are the towns of Flagstaff and Winslow, Arizona, places well worth a visit because of their many nearby attractions.
